

Within Shan Shui

Exclusive Preview Exhibition for Fine Art Asia 2012

16 September — 7 October 2012

Curator's Foreword

Following the exhibitions "In the Mood for Art" (September 2011) and "Sit and Watch the Rising Clouds" (May 2012), I am delighted to curate a third exhibition at The Upper House entitled "Within Shan Shui". This display of fine contemporary artworks captures the essence of beauty as artists make the connection between our modern lifestyle and the natural landscape.

"Shan Shui" (literally "mountain-water") was the traditional style of Chinese landscape painting, reflecting the harmony of man with nature. The image of tiny figures travelling through mountains beneath cascading waterfalls is a classic motif of traditional Chinese art. Today Asian contemporary artists, aware of social change and the challenges of modern urban society, find their own way to express the emotion of their generation through "Shan Shui" painting. The harmony they evoke reflects a world vastly different, yet in some ways remarkably similar.

On display at The Upper House, Hong Kong's leading contemporary hotel, "Within Shan Shui" is the exclusive preview exhibition for the 8th edition of Fine Art Asia, acclaimed as Asia's leading international fine art fair, which will be held at the Hong Kong Convention and Exhibition Centre from 4 to 7 October 2012.

I invite guests of The Upper House to experience the pleasure of cultured taste expressed by the artists in this exhibition; and I sincerely welcome you to Fine Art Asia 2012.

Special thanks to Mark Peaker for sharing his artistic vision for "Within Shan Shui" through his poem.

Message from The Upper House

The Upper House is pleased to work with Fine Art Asia 2012, Asia's leading international fine art fair, as the official venue for a preview of Asian contemporary art at this year's fair. "Shan Shui" literally means "mountain-water" or "landscape" and the painting style reflects the harmony of man with nature. The spirit of the art pieces also echoes the essence of The Upper House.

With the use of natural materials, distinctive sculptures and original artwork, the contemporary Oriental design of The Upper House exudes an understated feeling of residential calmness. The design is not Asian in a literal manner but reflects a subtle Asian sensitivity.

I would especially like to thank Andy Hei, the Director of Fine Art Asia 2012, for collaborating with The Upper House for the second year in a row. My special thanks also to the curator Calvin Hui for his vision and passion in creating the "Within Shan Shui" exhibition.

I warmly invite our House guests and friends to share in the artistic ambience and hope you will enjoy viewing the stunning artworks on display in the midst of Asian serenity at The Upper House.

Message from Andy Hei

Welcome to "Within Shan Shui", a special Preview Exhibition of Fine Art Asia 2012, Asia's premier annual Art and Antiques fair. We are delighted that for the second year in succession, some exceptional highlights of the fair are being displayed in the wonderful setting of The Upper House.

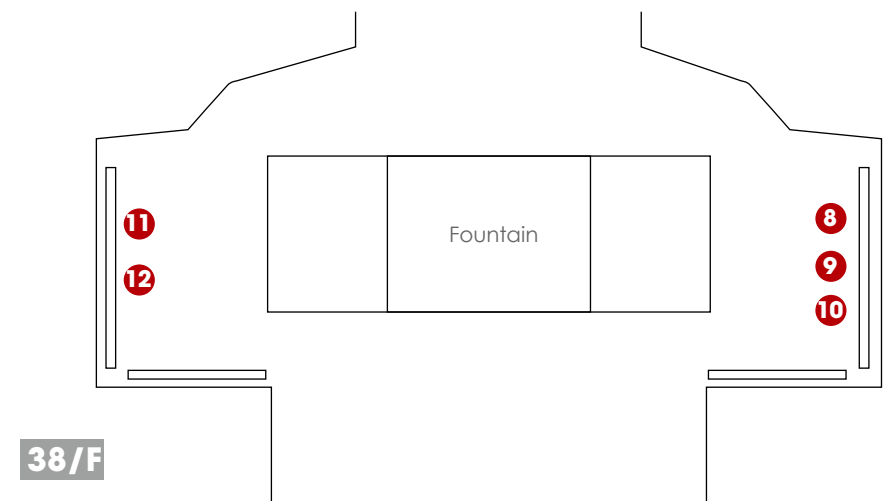

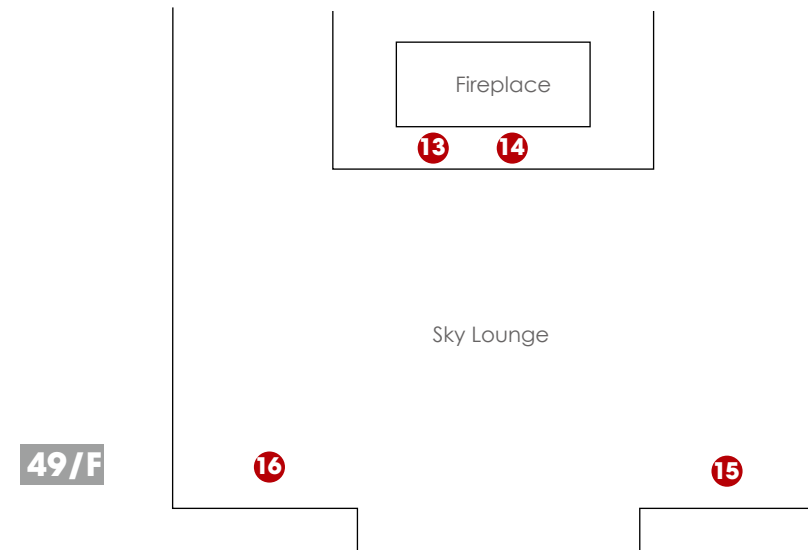

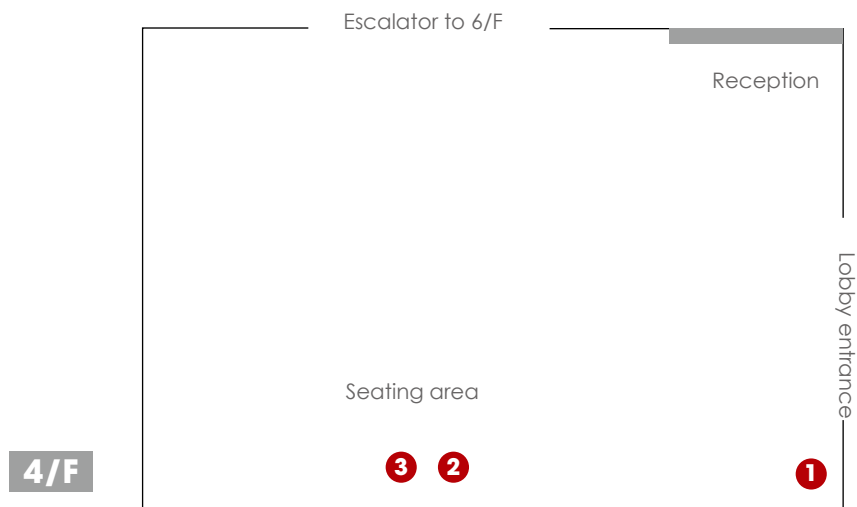

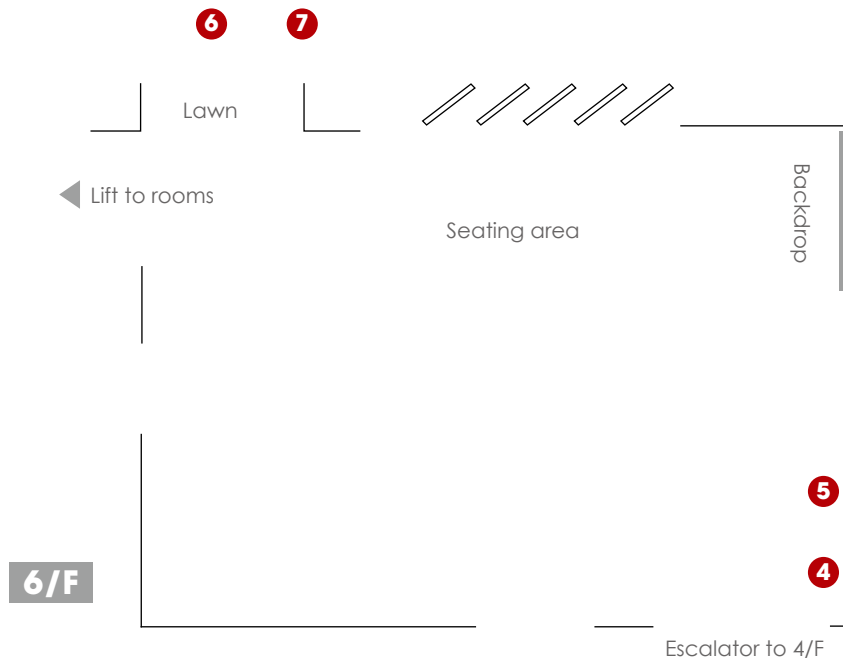

Fine Art Asia 2012 will be held from 4 – 7 October in the Hong Kong Convention and Exhibition Centre. This is the 8th edition of the fair, which will host over 90 of the world's leading galleries, presenting museum-quality Asian and Western Antiques, Fine Art Jewellery and Antique Silver, Impressionism and Modern Art, and Contemporary Art.

Fine Art Asia 2012 is the only fair in Asia which combines Antiques and Art, emphasizing the continuity in the history of art from antiquity to the present day. "Within Shan Shui" features artworks by some of Asia's finest contemporary artists who present their own individual interpretations of the ancient Chinese concept of "shan shui" (landscape painting).

I would like to thank The Upper House for being the Official Hotel Partner of Fine Art Asia 2012 and for hosting this exhibition in such an elegant setting. We hope you will enjoy viewing the artworks and look forward to seeing you at the fair!

Terry Stringer (b. 1946)

Terry Stringer is originally from St Ives, United Kingdom but moved with his family to New Zealand at a young age. He graduated from the Elam School of Fine Arts at the University of Auckland, the country's premier art school. His reputation as a leading sculptor in New Zealand was recognized in 2003 when he was a recipient of his country's national honour, Officer of the New Zealand Order of Merit. Stringer has exhibited extensively, with solo shows in Auckland, Sydney, Hong Kong, London and the USA. His bronze sculptures are complex and entail careful modelling in clay to realize what can be mind-bending illusions in three dimensions. He strives to create works that have a twist in the tail, and reward those who take the time to solve the puzzle.

Chen Chunhao (b. 1971)

Born in Nantou, Taiwan, Chen Chunhao graduated from the Fine Arts Department of Taipei National University of the Arts, Taiwan in 1996 and obtained a master's degree from the National Tainan University of the Arts in 1998. Since 1997 he has demonstrated an intricate use of industrial materials such as thumbtacks to recreate famous shan shui (mountain-water, hence landscape) paintings. Chen carefully "copies" landscape paintings found at the National Palace Museum, Taipei, and abroad, by arranging thousands of tiny stainless steel mosquito nails on a canvas with a special nail gun. The nails protrude about 1 cm from the surface and produce effects of light and shadow. Chen is inspired by traditional Chinese art to create a contemporary interpretation of shan shui.

Lin Guo Cheng (b. 1979)

Lin Guo Cheng was born in Shantou, Guangdong Province. In 2002 he studied at the renowned Sichuan Academy of Fine Arts, but in fact is a largely self-taught artist. From 2009 to 2012, his style changed dramatically, from bright and colourful oil paintings to pen and ink sketches of natural scenes which reflect a similar spirit to China's traditional "shan shui" painting style. Lin wished to return to a simple life, and to the simplest act of creation, with just a pen and piece of paper, in black and white. Recently he has been studying the subject of trees and their root support systems. His current works show his passion for trees which he imbues with symbolic meaning on the canvas. Lin treats trees as the embodiment of all nature.

Li Gang (b. 1962)

Born in Guangdong province, Li Gang practised traditional Chinese ink painting and printmaking from a young age. After years of painting in this style, he transformed his deep understanding of Chinese culture into new artistic concepts to revive the soul of ink and redefine and promote its new significance. Li has great respect for ink, which is the spirit of Chinese civilization. Through its evolution, ink has broadened in form while its spirit remains unchanged. Li has abandoned the traditional brush and uses "imprinting" as his medium. Through folding the paper, sprinkling water, soaking the paper in ink, spreading it on a flat surface, tearing it apart, and forming the strips into patchwork, he has developed his most personalized images in ink.

Chen Hongzhi (b. 1979)

Chen Hongzhi was born in Xianyou County, Fujian Province and graduated from the Fine Arts College of Fujian Normal University, majoring in oil painting. In 2005 Chen won the Dragonair Emerging Chinese Artist Award in Shanghai, while in 2007 his solo exhibition "The Lost Wall" in Shanghai and Beijing drew acclaim. Chen creates powerful works that reflect his feelings about urban civilisation. He paints natural landscapes on acrylic panels and then transforms these into three-dimensional installations intended for placement in urban spaces. He thus blurs the boundary between the city and nature by introducing natural elements into an urban context. His works highlight the fact that city-dwellers are gradually losing their connection with nature.

Rick Swain (b. 1949)

Born and educated in Christchurch, New Zealand, Rick Swain is inspired by the beautiful scenery of the Coromandel Peninsula where he now lives. His favourite medium is wood, in particular the native New Zealand kauri. The form his work takes is to some extent dictated by the timber he is presented with. He slowly observes the wood and gains a feel for what may be possible before starting to work each piece to create his vision. He says, "My works are mostly simple abstract forms with an emphasis on balance, and suggested movement or flow. Many of them have links to sights, sounds and feelings from my past, some seeming to evolve of their own accord."

Fang Zhaoling (1914-2006)

Fang Zhaoling was a leading pioneer woman artist of the 20th century, who had a long, distinguished career despite many hardships. She was a student of Zhao Shao'ang, a master of the Lingnan School which advocated that painting should reflect reality and not be bound by traditional formulae. She also studied with Zhang Daqian, who taught her the "splashed ink and colour" technique. Another influence was Qi Baishi, whose bold and free style in painting flowers, rich colours and calligraphic brushwork appealed to her greatly. Fang travelled to majestic landscapes in China, seeking out the vitality of nature. The strength and vigour of her compositions make it hard to believe they were done by a frail woman artist. Her works have been exhibited worldwide and are held in major museum collections.

Huang Yao (1917-1987)

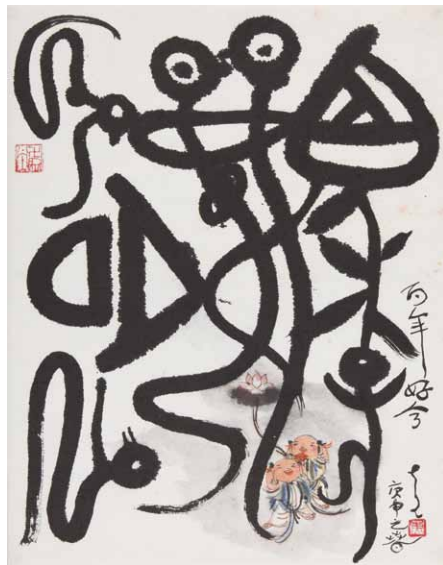

Huang Yao was one of the last practitioners of the highly respected Chinese literati recluse tradition. He was a star in the 1930s when Chinese cartoons were at their peak, and a well-known patriotic artist during the national struggle against the Japanese invasion. Huang Yao's mission in art was to practise the past, research the new and create long-lasting cultural offerings for people around the world to enjoy in times of peace and prosperity. Huang Yao's innovative paintings span across traditional Chinese categories, to more abstract works that rivalled his Western counterparts; all infused with his optimistic view of the world, and finished off with his unique 'upside down' calligraphy or chuyun shu (emerging from the clouds) that lends the air of a child's high spiritedness and conveys his passion for life. His calligraphic works also express a deep knowledge of Chinese etymology, an area that he spent years researching. Huang Yao made huge contributions as an artist and an educator in his birthplace in Shanghai, and across China, and then in Hong Kong, Vietnam, Thailand, Singapore and Malaysia.

香港當代藝術展及香港癌症基金慈善拍賣

It is scientifically proven that the entire human race is connected. We all share a common thread, joined by our emotions, experiences and empathy. This year, CONNECT brings together the work of 20 contemporary artists, who reflect on the links that bind us all.

Hong Kong Cancer Fund, which champions the importance of community, strongly believes in the importance of art in conveying emotions and bringing people together.

This year, Hong Kong Cancer Fund celebrates its 25th Anniversary of providing free information, professional guidance and peer support to anyone living with or affected by cancer.

In honour of this milestone, proceeds from a charity auction of artworks in the CONNECT exhibition will be donated to Hong Kong Cancer Fund's free services, in particular, their peer support network that unites all those touched by cancer – helping patients and their families gain strength through support.

CONNECT will be held as part of Fine Art Asia 2012, 4-7 October 2012 at Hong Kong Convention and Exhibition Centre.

Man Fung Yi (b. 1968)

One of Hong Kong's leading artists, Man Fung Yi meticulously crafts stainless steel and brass into graceful woven draperies of clothing and personal accessories like shoes and handbags which commemorate her own and her family's body shapes at a specific time and place. Her artworks are sought after by museums, corporate and private collectors all over the world for their femininity, strength, meticulous level of finish, and the spirit of Chinese ink which they embody. Man Fung Yi's sculptures are full of intriguing visual paradoxes, where the feeling of masculinity imparted by the metallic material is balanced by feminine qualities such as the soft forms of the clothing and the sentiments expressed in the work.

Leung Kui Ting (b. 1945)

Born in Guanzhou in 1945, Leung Kui Ting moved to Hong Kong in 1948 and in 1964 studied painting under the master Lui Shou Kwan, becoming part of the New Ink Painting movement. His paintings are widely exhibited in China, Hong Kong and overseas. Throughout his career Leung has explored the creative possibilities in traditional Chinese painting as he develops a style of landscape that is uniquely his own. He has focused particularly on the rocks, trees and mountains depicted by Chinese literati painters for centuries. However, the modern era has promoted him to insert a digital element into his work. Leung incorporates geometric shapes and broken lines into his ink paintings, which examine the nature of space.
